

Finally, there is a relatively new mole bait product on the market called Talpirid. The bait is “disguised” to look just like an earthworm – reminds me of a gummy worm. You place the worm in the tunnel; mole eats it, end of story. I don’t have any personal experience using this product but have heard many stories from the mole battle field that folks are having good results. The “worms” aren’t cheap though so you may need to assess your mole disgust level before starting this eradication program.
